Commitment

Grace and peace in the name of our Savior!

I was musing the other day on an old joke. You may have heard it before. I had to do with a breakfast plate. On the plate were eggs and ham. The punch line was: "The chicken participated; the pig was committed."

A simple definition, I suppose, is a pledge or agreement to do something. That is what we do in many ways (e.g. loans and contracts, etc.). But there is a very special one we make as Christians.

When the Holy Spirit moves us to acts of contrition and repentance, it also subsequently moves us to joy and new life because of the assurance we are given that our sins are forgiven and we are welcomed into a new community of love, support, encouragement and accountability. We give a pledge, a commitment, to be full participants in that community. We commit to supporting it with our time, our talents, our gifts and our service. That commitment is the beginning of a lifelong journey.

Along that journey are many challenges. Those occur when God interrupts and change is necessitated. We must decide among many things that compete for our attention and our resources. We are challenged to re-prioritize, to let go of some cherished things and grab hold of some others.

The good news is that we are transformed in the transition; our spirits are revived, our vision gets clear, our relationships are enlivened. We are committed. I write this today because we are in a season of discernment and commitment. I invite you to this process of clarification and commitment with me.

Breakfast is served!

Yours for a vital witness to Christ,

Clarence
